Welcome Letter

4-H Professionals:

Congratulations on choosing to serve youth through 4-H positive youth development programs. Your work is important to our youth, families, communities, and nation.

4-H prides itself on building each learning and positive youth experience with a scholarly and research foundation. In the 1980s, the 4-H professional, research, and knowledge (PRK) framework was developed through a research project to provide a basis for professional development. There have been periodic reviews and revisions as the field of positive youth development has progressed. In 2004, competencies were added to the work to create the PRKC.

We are pleased to present to you Growing Together: 4-H PRKC 2017. This document represents an extensive review and revision led by individuals from throughout the Cooperative Extension System. Please review the list of committee members on the next page to see the 41 experts representing 24 land-grant universities who contributed to this work. We appreciate their dedication and hard work in this endeavor.

The 4-H PRKC consists of six domains that create the framework for professional competencies that are vital to the success of the 4-H professional. Each domain is broken into topics, components, and competencies.

This document is useful for the 4-H professional in determining his or her own professional competence and professional development goals. The PRKC can also be used as a guide for writing job descriptions and determining roles of the 4-H professionals. Individuals and teams responsible for group professional development can utilize the tools to development a training plan and design. A self-assessment tool accompanies the PRKC that will be used by 4-H professionals.

Using the PRKC will help assure you are prepared to meet the needs of young people involved in 4-H youth development programs. 4-H strives to be a leader in positive youth development, reaching young people and empowering them with skills to lead for a lifetime. You are an important part of this journey. Thank you for your contributions.

Sincerely,

PRKC Co-Chairs
